

Teenage Mentoring Teenagers

by Praise

For me, being in a university is the most dynamic stage life throws at us. It is a stage where most of us become adults. We get to choose 'what' and 'who' we want to become in life generally. It is also a place where we experience a lot of changes and peer pressure is at it's peak; since our parents are not with us there. A person's university life is a mirror of his/her upbringing and personal choices or priorities. Placing proper priorities is vital in order to fully maximize time, opportunities, connections and the pleasures university life has to offer.

As a Christian, your number one priority should be living a righteous life. It also includes seeking GOD'S opinion in the Bible before making any decision. Being righteous on campus is very difficult especially in this generation where perversity is abound. Avoiding parties where immorality and drug abuse are showcased should be paramount. The Bible says we should flee from all appearances of evil.

Also as a Christian, we should not disgrace the name of Lord by getting very low grades or engaging in examination malpractice; which is even worse. We should diligently focus on our education and avoid silly distraction. We are sent to the university to learn and acquire knowledge. This should be done with all due diligence as a service unto to God.

As a TGWAC member, we all have a common goal; which is to impact! We are meant to positively influence those around us. Be it a roommate, classmate or even a friend. We can impact others directly by; urging others to follow you to church, help others out financially or academically if you have the capacity. Giving sound advice to others when they are confused with immorality and nonsense. When we do this consistently, other lives are impacted indirectly. Others will see your life and desire to emulate your lifestyle.

Also as a TGWAC, we should choose good and more intelligent friends. I know of people that the 'university life' has changed both positively and negatively. The determining factor is peer pressure. If you choose God fearing, intelligent and incorrigible friends, you will less likely fall into the negative consequences.
