

Dear Editor,
Our Public Officers are negative role models

"I will still sponsor Mmesoma chukwu Education in either USA, CANADA Or USA, to her Master's degree level regardless of whether or not she falsified her results," states Igbo billionaire Bitcoin chief on his verified Twitter account. He goes on to express his concern about the widespread acceptance of illegality in Nigeria, such as the inauguration of a president who did not win the elections and the celebration of elected officials who engage in election rigging. He argues that if these actions were not celebrated, young people would not feel the need to forge their certificates or results. He emphasizes the need to address this issue in society as a whole.

Furthermore, he asserts that if society expects them to accept, celebrate, and defend a president who rigged the election with a forged certificate, they should also not ruin the future of a young girl by penalizing her for forging a certificate. He personally pledges to contact her and explain that her JAMB number does not determine her potential in life, and advises her against engaging in forgery in the future. He reaffirms his commitment to sponsoring her education abroad, along with his company @voice of the east. He concludes by stating that when society is ready to rectify the existing problems, it should start by holding public officials accountable, many of whom were elected with forged certificates. He believes that these officials serve as negative role models, and people like Mmesoma are emulating them.

Billionaire Gaius chibueze

Dear Editor,
CBN former Governor Godwin Emefiele was arraigned in Court;

Not about the depletion of the nation's foreign reserves, not about the forex round tripping fraud, not about the claims of using hundreds of millions of dollars to defend the Naira, not about the billions frittered in the name of COVID loans, not about the magical pyramids, not about the IMF and World Bank billions of dollars of loans, not about the billions of contracts awarded, not about the billions spent on redesigning of the Naira, not about conflict of interest, not about the cabal connections, not about the Development Bank controversies, not about wrecking the economy of the country...but about a gun. Hmmn. Who did this to Nigeria?

Sen. Shehu sani tweet

Dear Editor
Is this not from frying pan to fire?

This is the same government that removed subsidy, threw Nigerians into excruciating economic hardship while living in utmost comfort with our common wealth. They asked us to sacrifice our two hands but have refused to let go of one of their fingers. To make the matter worse, impoverished Nigerians are still engaged in tribal war of attrition when the elite class has achieved consensus in looting our common patrimony—no ethno-religious division. All the political parties' representatives will get new SUVs. They throw bones of ethno-religious bigotry to divide the masses, in order not to fight back, yet united in corruption and kleptomania. The joke is on the masses left to survive on only N8k that might not even get to them. I bet you 60% of so-called palliatives will still be looted by the same ravenous ruling class who mindlessly budgeted such humongous amount to buy bullet-proof SUVs when the masses are literally groaning.

By Akpaka Ogie. Abuja

Dear Editor,
OUR LEADERS ARE GREEDY

The reason why these buyers purchase and distribution idea can never be towed by this APC govt are very simple: Option A: If the govt uses the money to buy buses, it will be very easy to find out how many buses that were bought and so determine how much was actually spent out of the N500b and most Nigerians across the party line will be able to also benefit from the services of the buses. Option B If the Tinubu govt pays their so called 8k it will be very easy for them to pay it only to their political party faithful who must have facilitated the submission of the blurred election results to INEC server. It will also be very easy for them to compile names of dead and yet to be born Nigerians, Sudanese, Nigeriens & Chadians as the beneficiaries of the 8k and by so doing it will make it very easy for them to spend not more than N10B out of the N500B and keep the nearly N500b intact and can easily be grown by any bank to N1 trillion in the next 4 years for the 2027 election bullion van operations. So, which of the two options do think still think they should adopt? They are very greedy and don't care about the poor.

Instead of giving 8k to 12m poor families, why not distribute buses across the country to ease the cost of transportation? You would also be creating jobs in the process.

And each state and FCT will get 216 buses which will drastically reduce transport fares and used for 10yrs without giving issues as regards repairs. Is this not better than 8k per household for six months which implementation monitor cannot be guarantee....

God Almighty guide our leaders right and help us. This 8k is a wrong decision at wrong time, God safe Nigeria``