CAN THE NEW COALITION ADC CRACK THE HARD NUT?

The game of Politics we are witnessing today in Nigeria is the alignment and realignments of politicians crossing over from one political party to the other. We see them in their numbers especially the lawmakers dumping the party that brought them to relevance and moving into the ruling All Progressive Party. Most critical and in great numbers are those dumping their parties and moving into the Coalition Party the African Democratic Congress. The ADC is now the new political bride and all politicians both expired, fresh and young are moving in droves into the Party. Many people are of the opinion that what is happening now was exactly what happened in 2015 with the formation of the APC Coalition that ousted president Godluck Jonathan. This is strongly supported by the fact that the times are hard and the present APC administration does not seemed to have the solution to the myriads of social and economic challenges plaguing the nation. Nigerian are still suffering under the yoke of hunger, insecurity, unemployment. The economy under President Bola Tinubu is struggling and inflation is biting hard and the ordinary Nigerians are feeling the heat. Many have said that 2027 is a battle of Nigerians Versus the ruling APC. It is about poverty, hardship, anger, hunger, frustration and insecurity ravaging the Nigerian people. The big question is 'will the new coalition masquerading as the ADC be able to pull off the rug from the feet of APC which is the ruling party. This takes the center stage in our August 2025 edition with a caption.
