

Dear Editor,

We hail the return of high quality journalism to Nigeria. The late Dele Giwa will be applauding from the great beyond. This your Edition 'Oil Theft in Nigeria; Who are the thieves bleeding Nigeria Dry?' blew me away.

Chief Christopher Ughowa Abuja.

Dear Editor,

Your Magazine is the Magazine of the century. One of the best and widely read and circulated magazine in Nigeria and Africa. The Magazine is always well packaged with preciseness of the automation for your delight. Keep it up.

Prince Sixtus Opara Abuja.

Dear Editor,

Development Monitor is the most consistent and realistic monthly Magazine of the year. You deserve an award.

Prince Dr. Charles Edet.

Dear Editor,

This is another sizzling Edition. Keep up the good work. Ugo kings

Dear Editor

The thieves in our bus

An employee received his salary and boarded a crowded bus back to his home, and there was a thief in the bus, so the thief stole the employee's money from his pocket. After the employee had reached his destination and the driver asked for the fare, the employee found nothing in his pocket, his face blushed and his tongue became heavy, so the driver said mockingly: Shame on you, you consider yourself a respected person while you cannot afford your transport fare! Pride hit a portion of the thief's ego and he said to the mocking driver: My brother, the teacher's fare is on my me! The thief offered to help the teacher, his victim, not out of pity for the poor teacher but to buy from the other passengers their trust and confidence, and to use some of the stolen money to earn himself a respect before the rest of the passengers in the bus.

The poor employee smiled and said to the thief: May God bless you and multiply your likes, sir! Then some of the passengers in the bus praised the thief, praised his kindness, and also prayed for him and that God should increase his kinds. Since then, the number of thieves has increased, and they still receive our thanks and appreciation; We are still on a bus where thieves rob us, and we thank them for their kindness. This is the metaphor of the state of our nation, Nigeria! Looking at what the politicians are campaigning with, and what their supporters are praising them for, one cannot do but say that: indeed, the victims of the thieves on our bus this year are surplus!

The politicians rob us our education to send their children overseas to get standard education. They rob us our peace but travel oversea to enjoy peace in another man's land. They give us death-traps as roads but fly in their expensive planes. They deny us electricity but buy themselves fuel to power their generators. They do all of this on the detriment of our collective comfort and rights, they equally weaponized poverty to bait us with the crumbs falling from their dining tables during election time.

Our only means of having the feelings of what it feels like graduating from a standard institution is when we see their children being celebrated on the social medias; we aren't even invited- who invites the downtrodden to feast?!

While they do this, they save some of the stolen money from the national treasury and then share it among us to buy our consciences under the guise of helping the electorates and then some of the oppressed citizens praise them, thank them and celebrate them.

This is the reason why the politicians who are stealing our money from our national treasury are increasing. No matter how big a politician gives in this Nigeria of today, he deserves no appreciation, what he deserves is to explain when he is going to return the rest of the money and then ask for forgiveness from the people, they have stolen their all to buy themselves all of the comforts in another man's lands. The thieves in our bus are increasing all the time because we continue praising them for returning small from the many, they steal from us.

Dear Editor

FELLOW NIGERIANS IT IS NOW OR NEVER

Rishi Sunak is the first non-British White Caucasian Prime Minister of the UK. He is 42 years of age, full of life, and with a blueprint on how to deliver Great Britain from economic crisis and set her on the part of growth. He's a Hindu Descendant, with an Asian ancestry of his father from India and mother from East Africa who were Immigrants to the UK where his father Yashvir studied medicine and worked as a medical doctor (GP) and his mother Usha a pharmacist. Nobody talked about his root - tribe, religion, ancestry, etc. Everyone is interested in his capabilities to grow the economy. Let the man with evidential and verifiable capabilities like Rishi Sunak to rescue and grow the dead Nigerian economy be given the keys to Aso Rock.

Can we forget about our tribe, religion, political party affiliation, personal interests, etc and vote for competence in 2023? Can we think about our collective interest first and allow the man that has demonstrated and shown the capacity to solve our problems be our President? Let the over 371 ethnic Groups and 500 languages in Nigeria come together and vote for a competent, result-oriented, mentally sound, healthy, young man with no traceable corruption traits or allegations, come 2023. For once, let's be civilized, shun religious and ethnic bigotry, politics of self-aggrandizement, political party affiliation and other vices that have held the most populous Black Nation down and backward for decades. Let's see 2023 elections as our only and last opportunity to emancipate Nigeria from the financial, economic and political quagmire that old, wicked, corrupt Politicians have plunged her into. Nigeria is bleeding and has sunk deep into the ocean, almost at the bottom, if not already at the bottom. Let us vote for that man that has shown glaring competence like Rishi Sunak of the UK to redeem Nigeria now, else we all will in no distant time glee sorrowfully to the symphony and dance with agony to the rhythm called 'irredeemable' played from the drums of the few old, wicked corrupt political Gladiators that have enslaved the Giant of Africa.

By- UgoKings