

Dear Editor, Reno Omokri and his rotten conscience

There comes a point in a dying nation where the loudest danger is no longer the terrorists in the forests it is the hypocrites in fine suits, the professional praise-singers, and the influencers who trade national tragedy for personal profit. And in that league, Reno Omokri has not only joined he has built the headquarters. This is a man who once weaponized empathy, who cried with the poor, fought for the oppressed, and branded himself the conscience of the nation. But today, that conscience is so rotten, so compromised, so cheaply auctioned that it can barely lift its head.

Reno Omokri is no longer a voice he is an echo. An echo of whoever signs his next deal.

An echo of whoever invites him to the next dinner. An echo of whichever politician tosses him the next bone. This is a man who used to scream "injustice!" but now screams "support the government" even when the soil is wet with the tears of mothers whose children were kidnapped at dawn. His stomach has become his ideology. His wallet his theology. His relevance his religion. Every time Nigerians die, Reno Omokri writes a thread-length sermon explaining why the people should "be calm," "be patient," "be patriotic" all while he is hundreds of miles away in comfort, sipping coffee and uploading selfies. He has the audacity to lecture Nigerians from hotel rooms he did not pay for, about suffering he does not feel, in a country he rarely steps into.

And when the nation is on fire, Reno is always conveniently standing beside the fire extinguisher not to use it, but to take a picture with it. You say the attacks are too coordinated to be coincidence? No what is too coordinated is the spin, the excuses, the propaganda, the sudden rise of "analysts" who turn every massacre into a political strategy discussion. Terrorism thrives when leadership sleeps. And those defending that sleep are helping tuck the nation deeper into its coffin. Let's speak the raw truth: Nigerians are not asking for the president to perform miracles. They are asking for the president to perform his job. But instead of facing reality, Reno and his co-labelers are trying to hypnotize the nation with fearmongering about Libya and Sudan — as if Nigerians are too blind to see the cracks spreading under their own feet. How do you tell people whose lives are collapsing to "wait for the ballot box"? Hunger is not waiting. Kidnappers are not waiting. Terrorists are not waiting. Graves are not waiting. But Reno wants Nigerians to wait while he does not wait to cash in on every opportunity to defend authority. You cannot ask people to stand with a system that refuses to stand with them. You cannot guilt-trip a nation into silence while their homes turn into burial grounds. You cannot lecture grieving parents about patience while you chase clout from safe distances. So let it be said plainly: Nigeria is bleeding. The government is blinking. And Reno Omokri is busy polishing the mirror instead of sounding the alarm. This country does not need motivational speakers of failure. It does not need evangelists of excuses. It does not need political bellboys pretending to be patriots. Nigeria needs truth and the truth is this: Anyone telling Nigerians to "stand with power" while the nation falls apart is not a patriot. They are an accomplice. And Reno Omokri? He is not just complicit he is the soundtrack of that betrayal.

General Christopher Musa: Renewed Leadership for a Stronger and Safer Nigeria

The approval of General Christopher Gwabin Musa (rtd.) by President Bola Ahmed Tinubu as Minister of Defence has been met with widespread commendation, marking a significant moment in Nigeria's evolving security landscape. His appointment is a strategic decision rooted in competence, experience, and an unwavering dedication to national service.

General Musa's distinguished military career reflects decades of frontline leadership, operational excellence, and steadfast commitment to the sovereignty and stability of the Nigerian state. As a former Chief of Defence Staff, he demonstrated exceptional capacity to coordinate joint operations, rebuild inter-agency trust, and modernize Nigeria's defence architecture. His appointment also highlights the value of national collaboration. Notably, the support of the Governor of Kaduna State, Senator Uba Sani, stands as a strong endorsement of General Musa's capabilities. Senator Sani's encouragement anchored in respect for the General's track record, discipline, and integrity reflects his commitment to national security and belief in leadership driven by merit and patriotism. This alignment between federal and state leadership is essential for tackling Nigeria's security challenges more cohesively. General Musa's career has been defined by discipline, patriotism, and exemplary dedication to duty. As he assumes this critical national responsibility, Nigerians look forward to a renewed focus on proactive defence strategies, enhanced military welfare, strengthened intelligence systems, and deeper collaboration between security agencies and communities. Above all, his devotion to service remains the foundation of public confidence. General Musa's resolve to put Nigeria first has never wavered, and his return to national duty reinforces the belief that with the right leadership, Nigeria's security challenges are surmountable. President Tinubu's choice sends a clear message of intent: that the defence of the nation will be entrusted to leaders with experience, integrity, and unquestionable commitment to the Nigerian people. At this defining moment, it is important for all Nigerians to stand firmly behind our Armed Forces and the government in the ongoing fight against terrorism. National security cannot be left solely to the military it demands collective responsibility. Through unity, vigilance, and shared commitment, we can build the safe, stable, and prosperous Nigeria we all aspire to.

TINUBU'S PAST TWITS AND WHY HE SHOULD SIT UP

Bola Ahmed Tinubu (09-09-2014). The Festering Boko Haram attacks on the North East and Massacre of innocent citizens is concrete proof that NIGERIA has no government.

Bola Ahmed Tinubu (14-4-2014). On matters of Security, the bulk stops at the President's Table. Like in other Countries, Jonathan is the Chief Security Officer. Stop the Boko Haram.

Premium Times (04-19-2023). Tinubu Criticizes Buhari, Other Nigerian leaders for poor governance, failed promises.

Bola Ahmed Tinubu (04-14-2014). My heart bleeds for our people and the country over the deaths in Yanyan. A govt unable to protect its Citizens deserved to be queried.

Bola Ahmed Tinubu (01-21-2015). This is Jonathan Army, not Nigerian Army. How can a man who rose to become Major General be said to be uneducated?

Bola Ahmed Tinubu (29-11-2013). If Police have become the Armed wing of PDP let us know. If the Army is now patriotic towards one party let us know, we will all join the Army.

Bola Ahmed Tinubu (14-04-2014). Too many lives are being wasted, too much blood being shed, too many Limbs severed yet this government carries on with its cavalier attitude.

Bola Ahmed Tinubu (29-01-2014). I have no fear either for my political future or present. My greatest fear is for Nigeria and Nigerians. Nigeria is in the wrong hands.

Please Bola Ahmed Tinubu NIGERIA is now in your hands to stop the Boko Haram, Terrorists, Kidnapping, injustice, oppression from your political party and the killings all over the Nation. Above all Mr President revive the dead economy. Again, Mr President stop the oppression and arrests of protesters if indeed you stand for democracy.
