

Dear Editor,

What is Buhari leaving behind?

He led the country without any economic direction. He presided over a Government that failed to secure the lives of Nigerians; 63k dead, 3m IDPs and 366k refugees in neighbouring countries. He failed to restructure as he promised. He granted waivers to the rich and impoverished the poor. He closed the borders for those who import bags of rice on motorcycles and permitted those who use the ships. He built magical Rice pyramids that disappeared after three days. He left uncompleted projects with huge debts to service for decades. He enabled, enriched and reinforced a cabal for 8 years. He appointed and retained failures and reward them with extensions.

He was weak in taking decisions and runaway when it's tough.

He has no house in London but made London his home. He left behind record inflation, record devaluation, record unemployment, record fall in GDP, record figures of poverty and record plunder of state resources. He left behind a nation with 60m people suffering from mental illnesses. He is leaving behind the health workers on strike. He set up traps for the next Government in order to make his own look better."

Dear Editor,

A thief is a thief no matter the pat on his Back

You can't still someone's car, repaint it, repair it, and make it look newer than it was when you stole it, and then ask the Owner to forget his car and allow you use it, since you've made it look better. You're still a THIEF. I don't understand how our society started giving Thieves pats on the back; no shame again, no moral values, no integrity. We push and massively corroborate evil and criminal narratives, especially when it benefits us. This has largely contributed to the decadence that has eaten deep into the fabrics of the strata of the foundation of our society. Thieves are now extolled and cheered to carry on and do good works. What good can a Thief possibly do?
