

Dear Editor,

NATIONAL ASSEMBLY'S OVERREACH: A THREAT TO DEMOCRACY AND GOOD GOVERNANCE

The recent actions of the National Assembly, where legislators are openly nominating individuals for executive positions in the North West Development Commission, raise serious concerns about the role of the legislature in Nigeria's democracy. This move not only displays a shocking level of hypocrisy and contempt for the constitution but also undermines the principles of fairness and equal opportunity. The National Assembly's actions are particularly disturbing because they seem to prioritize the interests of those with connections to power over those of ordinary citizens. By appointing children of influential individuals to executive positions, the Assembly is essentially shutting out qualified and deserving candidates from less privileged backgrounds.

This not only perpetuates inequality but also undermines the legitimacy of the commission and its ability to effectively serve the people. The question remains: is it within the National Assembly's powers to nominate individuals for executive positions? The answer is a clear capital NO, but what is certain is that this practice is not in line with the principles of good governance and democracy. Recommendations for appointments to executive positions should ideally come from the supervising ministry or agency, not from legislators who are supposed to provide oversight. Furthermore, it is puzzling that two members of the National Assembly, elected by a fraction of their constituencies, can claim to represent the interests of the entire region. This raises questions about the legitimacy and accountability of the Assembly's actions. In a democratic system, the separation of powers is essential to ensure that each branch of government remains accountable and effective. The National Assembly's overreach into executive territory undermines this separation and threatens the very foundations of Nigeria's democracy. It is imperative that the National Assembly reconsiders its actions and respects the boundaries of its constitutional powers. The people of Nigeria deserve a government that is transparent, accountable, and fair, not one that perpetuates inequality and undermines democratic principles.

By PETERAMEH

Dear Editor

Africa Must Take Charge of Its Own Destiny

The time has come for African leaders to think and act responsibly, prioritizing the welfare of their citizens rather than relying on Western nations for support.

With the newly elected U.S. President Trump disbanding USAID and withdrawing support for WHO, it is evident that Africa must become self-reliant. However, the deep-rooted corruption among African leaders has clouded their judgment, preventing them from taking bold steps toward initiating meaningful developmental projects. This is unacceptable, especially considering the continent's vast human and natural resources. Africa must wake up and take control of its own future. Leaders must allow institutions to function without interference, fostering genuine growth and development across the continent. It is time to break free from dependency and build a self-sufficient Africa.

Message to my son

MY SON, LISTEN TO ME CAREFULLY

Sex is sweet but it can ruin your life and bright future. First lesson - Your penis is not your friend, it's as much as your enemy until you know how to control it. Learn self-control especially when it comes to your sexual urge, you will never regret it in life. A man who is sexually disciplined has already conquered life 80%, the most dangerous battle men face in their life time always comes from sex. To protect your life and your future, you must first have self-control over your sexual appetite. There are sex you should never have; they are women you should never sleep with. Avoid under age teens, married women, prostitute etc.

Many men are prison because they lack sexual discipline. Many men are dead because they lack sexual discipline. Many men are infected with dangers diseases because they lack sexual discipline. Many men are failures and stagnated in life because they lack sexual disciplines. Many men married wrongly and are suffering dangerously because they lack sexual discipline. Many men are the chains of women because they lack sexual discipline. The cheapest men to destroy by women are men that lacks sexual discipline. Don't be one, as an alpha male, sexual discipline is a super power to you. Be wise. Unanimous