As Nigeria Begins The Search For A New Leadership

A new electioneering cycle has come and Nigerians have begun to search and look out for a new crop of political leaders that are expected to steer the ship of state that will lead us into a new era of peace, progress and development. The journey so far has been eventful but the road ahead is still turbulent and requires a crop of determined, hardworking, disciplined, sacrificial and dedicated leaders who are genuinely committed to the cause of our fatherland. The coast is not yet clear and the indices are much more revealing. The naked truth is that no matter the odds the country must move forward. Nigeria belongs to all of us and all hands must be on course to redeem the nation from the present scourge of insecurity, hardship, ineptitude and poverty. We must insist on good and productive leadership that will benefit all citizens of this country irrespective of tribe or ethnic affiliation. We must screen all the aspirants from a true conscience devoid of sentiments and primordial considerations.

In order to achieve good governance serious efforts must be made by all to eliminate corruption and inefficiency and enhance accountability in government. Public funds must be judiciously utilized to meet the yearnings and aspirations of the people and not for accumulation of a privileged few. We look forward to an incoming leadership that will partner with private economic agenda in such a way that there will be mutual trust and confidence. Nigeria as a developing country is confronted with the challenge of reforming its financial sector. Therefore, we are looking forward to a good leadership at every level that will accelerate the development of our financial institutions in order to make them respond effectively to the changing global environment and enhance our international standing and credibility. Nigeria desires a leadership that will encourage the participation of a vibrant civil society in the debate of economic policies and ensure masses support for such policies. Nigerians must look out and vote for leaders with credibility and record of performance. The search for this new political direction is captured in October 2026 edition with a caption; As the 2027 Electioneering Campaign kicks off, 'issues on the front burner'

Political campaigns should not be reduced to battle ground where political thugs and hired miscreants are used to unleash mayhem to innocent persons. It should be an avenue for aspirants to sell their manifestoes to the electorates who eventually will decide to vote for or against them. The onus is on the current administration and all the security agencies to ensure that electoral campaigns are conducted in a peaceful atmosphere devoid of rancor, bitterness and acrimony. It is the responsibility of all the stakeholders to work hard to ensure that the 2027 General Elections are conducted in a free, fair and peaceful manner that will prove that our political journey have come of age. We wish all the Political parties a peaceful, issues-based campaign as we ultimately trust the Almighty God to help Nigeria choose the best leaders that will lead the country towards the path of peace. Progress and rapid development. God bless Nigeria.
