

Dear Editor,

Politicians are the cause of Military Coups in Africa

Politicians are using their hands to invite the military to take overpower from them and put a stop to years of democracy in different African countries, because of those fraudulent elections they kept conducting. You can't truncate the will of the people, steal their mandate, violate the fundamental rights of your citizens, bastardize your constitution, make a mess of your judiciary, and expect the military not to kick you out. Many gone, more to follow soon.

each to States Governors to provide palliatives. You and I know that the money will be looted by the Governors and the people will not see any palliatives. The masses know this, yet they will do nothing about the scam. Until, the day the masses come out into the street on peaceful protest and ensure that everything is grounded until the change is affected, their sufferings will continue. This is the sad truth. Our evil and corrupt leaders will never allow the people to breathe until they themselves are stopped from breathing.

ECOWAS Should shut up on Mali

Alassane Quattara is threatening the fragile peace in Cote d'Ivoire with his third term ambition, and the inept and corrupt ECOWAS is quiet. If the body is indeed relevant, peer review on good governance and democracy, which it claims to be one of its core objectives, will suffice in ensuring that leaders of various countries in the sub-region don't act recklessly and carelessly. Must they wait for another coup or round of violence before they wake up from their indulgence and inertia? While the Mali situation is sad, it is a lesson to these power drunk demagogues we have as presidents in the ECOWAS. Sambaye Ousmane Niger

Dear Editor

The West is playing double standard

It appears some people do not really understand the situation on ground here. If you are a puppet of the West, your sins are forgiven. You can rule forever and that's okay.

Why should the evil USA be talking of democracy in Niger or anywhere else in Africa for that matter? Which democracy are we even taking about in the first place? Lest we forget, is there anything even remotely resembling democracy Saudi Arabia, Oman, Qatar, Bahrain, Kuwait, United Arab Emirates etc? The answer is a resounding NO!! Then why is the USA, EU and NATO not too keen on invading and installing democratic values, norms and traditions there? Again, the answer is simple. They're friends, if not puppets of the USA. Watch and see what shall happen to Saudi Arabia now that it has joined BRICS.

Dear Editor

Is Nigeria in bondage? What is the problem of Nigeria?

Suffice to say an average Nigerian is living in bondage. The current economy of Nigeria tells it all. There is high cost of living. Prices of essential commodities has gone up... Skyrocketing beyond the reach of the average man or woman. Our political leaders don't seem to care a hoot. As they political leaders are living on affluence at the detriment of the average Nigerians. Our spiritual leaders are seemed to be sleeping and in slumber. Even if substations like these were recorded in the holy books. There were genuine ways they remedied. There is moral and spiritual bankruptcy in in the places of worship. Honesty and sincerity are been thrown into gutters. Nobody seems to stand for truth and justice. As the end time indeed come. Is the world going to end with Nigeria? Mr Fred Akpoti Kaduna

Recall what happened in Pakistan some years back. General Pervesh Musharraf came on board through a coup but took the side of the USA. The Western powers welcomed him with open arms and there was not a word of condemnation against him anywhere in the perverted western media. General Chung do Wan was in power in South Korea for decades. Nobody in the West saw anything wrong with that because he took sides with the West. He did well really but looted his country dry. Eventually he retired to a Buddhist monastery and gave up ALL HIS ILL-GOTTEN wealth in sincere repentance. The West was embarrassed because they had been praising him all along as a Saint.

Dear Editor

Who will end all these aberrations?

is it the unrepentant evil and corrupt leaders in Nigeria who will readily sell their mother's soul for money? or the misguided masses who even though pushed to the wall will rather jump the wall and continue to run instead of turning and fighting back? My learned friend, rest yourself, Nigerians are not serious. We are not ready to liberate ourselves. Can you imagine, instead of the federal government using the borrowed 800million dollars to revamp the refineries, they are busy sharing 5million dollars

For the third straight year, Saudi Arabia has been at war with Yemen. The destruction in Yemen is a million times worse than that of Ukraine because while Ukraine is pretending to be fighting back, Yemen is simply taking all the venom from Saudi Arabia and the USA in silent humiliating agony. How many people here have even heard about this war in Yemen? The situation became so bad that Iran intervened in support of Yemen. [Yes, you heard me right.] The USA promptly labelled Iran a terrorist state. Guess what? Yemen rose from its ashes and beat off Saudi Arabia and the USA. China then came in, made peace between Iran and Saudi Arabia thus effectively ending the Yemen War. Who's the devil here now?
